“ I remember Lisa she loved her 2 Grandchildren dearly Jaden and Justin. Everyday she called her son Tony always asking about them. How they doing. Her first Grandson she called him Lamb chop was Jaden. She always telling me that. Gina your so lucky you to have two beautiful boys. She always telling that she loved my hair long and straight. the same her mother's hair..even when she's in the hospital a week ago Monday before she pass away she told me again about my hair. Lisa We will be missing you being a Grandmother to my children. I just can't over with that your gone. Gone but never forgotten.

“ I forgot to say, that losing Lisa also feels like an end of era. I feel like I'm Lisa a connection to my past as well. Alot of my nostalgic memories for the old neighborhood I grew up in, and things I watched on TV as a kid... music...Lisa energy, and influence hovers over that. Even before she died, and I took trips walking around the old neighborhood...I felt Lisa's presence there. We were also connected being Pisces...she was a proud Pisces...and we shared the same birthday. One of my regrets is not getting together to celebrate our birthday together enough. But I remember her buying me a leather jacket for my birthday when I was kid. My first leather jacket. Lisa will definitely never be forgotten. She was never was when she was alive. I thought of Lisa often. Like I said, many things reminded me of Lisa. A TV show she loved. And I see her smile in my brother Travis. Travis can't speak for himself, but he felt her and misses her as well. He remembers how Lisa liked to see him dance...his signature dance move. Lol. And that's what Lisa was about. Wanting you to show yourself and be free spirited. I will definitely go out here and be more...bc that's one of the things she always nudged me on....being more outgoing. So I will try my best.

“ I remember Christmas, Thanksgiving and birthdays with Lisa, and how she always loved Chocolate cake and ice cream. She always knew where the presents were at- and told us. I remember how Lisa hated eating kidney for for dinner, and gave it to me. I remember how Lisa was the first to learn how to get out of the play pen our parents had for us when we were small. I remember how Lisa wanted to venture out and do mischievous things sometimes when Lisa wanted to stick it to you. But, I also remember Lisa for the glamorous hair styles she would wear and created. How she used to baby sit other other kid's, and style their hair because their parents didn't know how to do their hair. I remember Lisa's educational ambitions, going to beauty school and nursing. I remember Lisa for the good cook she was. I remember Lisa as a sister and a friend. I could always talk to her in ways I couldn't talk to other people. We'd be on the phone hours, laughing letting out our personal frustrations or concerns of politics, public safety issues, what's going on in the world and general health concerns. I realize I won't have that again cause Lisa is gone on to be with a new friend, the best one you can have, Jesus. I am truly going to miss you Lisa.

“ I just remember my aunt Lisa always making the most out of everything. She enjoyed the simple things--her TV shows. Music. Movies. She liked sharing her favorite things with you when they came on, and made it so exciting. I remember her dancing around the house. She liked watching those cheesy 80s work out videos and making fun of them at the same time. Lisa liked to look nice, and she liked her spaces to be nice. She was always doing something to make her situations better with whatever she had. I remember her painting her bedroom pink and white even though she wasn't supposed to...bc she got tired of looking at the white walls. And that was her spirit. To make the best out of everything. If she couldn't make big changes, she thought of something. I remember how she liked to buy little trinkets and things to put around the house. She was a great cook. And made the best macaroni and cheese. Every time I make popcorn in the skillet, and add seasoning salt, I think about Lisa. She taught me that, and made it seem so exciting. Every time I make hot chocolate I think about Lisa, bc she used to make the best instant hot chocolate...and I still can't figure out how to recreate it. I guess you can say Lisa had a magic about her, bc so many regular life moments stand out, and feel special, feels bigger. Nostalgic.
